Predicts Low
Marriage Rate
After the War

Chicago, Nov. 5.—(P)—Dr. Philip M. Hauser, assistant director of the Bureau of Census, said today that the war "will leave population scars which will have far-reaching long-run effects," including the lowest marriage and birth rates ever recorded in this country.

"In an article in the current issue of the American Journal of Sociology," Dr. Hauser said, "the nation's participation in the war should accelerate the downward trend of fertility and slow the rate of national population."

"As to the effect of the war upon population, he stated that there would be a surplus of women of marriageable age; "hollow classes" resulting from the smaller number of children born in the war period; "will be perpetuated for generations, and the war will accelerate the distorted internal distribution of population" caused by the concentration of workers in war production plants.

Temporarily, he said, there has been an acceleration in the rate of the nation's population growth, but, he added, "the war will leave population scars which will have far-reaching longrun effects. The pattern can be traced from the results in Europe in World War I when the birth and marriage rates fell sharply as the war proceeded."

With the increase of the nation's armed forces, Dr. Hauser predicted the marriage rate would drop precipitately to a point "probably well below that ever before recorded in this country. The birth rate, he added, likewise would drop to a new low."

Rice-Hog Game May Be Last for Many Porkers

Fayetteville, Nov. 6 —(AP)— The prospect of Arkansas dropping its 15th straight Southwest Conference game against Rice Institute here Saturday faded today into a mere far-reaching implications of the first war-time "homecoming" game since 1918 struck at both undergraduates and former students.

In normal times, nine seniors would be playing college football for the last time on Arkansas soil but the possibility existed that instead it would be the last exhibition for all 36 members of the Razorback squad.

Many expect, in the first place, that the Southwest Conference will suspend for the duration with this season. In the second place, the entire squad may be called to the armed services in their various reserve branches, or be drafted before next September.

The nine whose days of football are numbered by the normal course of events are Jackies Clayton Wynne, Jay Lawhorn and Robert Green, and Backs Max Stallings, Billy Dick McNeill, Meredith Jones, Bratton Haynes, Robert Forte and Felice Cialone.

A nostalgic air pervaded the rolling Ozark campus today as the old grads began to gather for the festivities.

In order to make them feel as much at home as possible, the annual parade will be staged at 10 a. m. and Miss Reuben Gene Shaw, Henderson, Texas, will reign as homecoming queen.

The game will start at 2 p. m., 30 minutes earlier than usual.

MOVIE MOGULS
CHAPTER XXIII

THE two distinguished arrivals came straight to Pop's office. And Summers, the newspaperman—trust him to miss nothing!—promptly assumed the privilege of introducing them.

"Gentlemen!" he orated proudly, "this is Abe Loumann and T. J. Natwick from Hollywood. Come shake hands!"

But Loumann and Natwick themselves made the rounds, beaming and talking. Their brusque cordiality here stamped them for what they were—men of power. Natwick, the talent scout, and Loumann, the director, who had helped make World Features, Inc., a great name in Hollywood and throughout the amusement world. If these two men looked twice at any person, it was said, that person became a movie star before next dawn.

Blythe Miller had unconsciously backed behind a steel filing cabinet near the door. There, she was quite blocked out of the masculine ring; a panicky child, crouching unseen. She was about to flee on a desperate mission of her own, but Loumann's voice arrested her.

"Looking for a girl named Nancy Hale," he was saying now, to Pop. "World Features wants her, quick! The picture magazine people showed us her stills. T. J. and I saw her on the screen last night in St. Louis, too. She's perfect!"

Blythe went wide-eyed. They wanted Nancy!

Natwick spoke up briskly. "We saw her in the newsreels of the A. and M. game, Coach. I already told Abe here about her and her baby. I was down for that game myself, but I wanted Abe to see her, too."

"Don't need any test shots. Newsreels' enough," Loumann resumed. "Where is she? Understood she worked here. Get her quick, T. J. She work for you, Miller? We'll buy your contract. What you pay her? Don't matter, we'll buy it, send you a better office girl."

"Where is she?" Loumann demanded. "Where is she now?"

"Fi—five hundred dollars?" Pop croaked.

Blythe, overhearing all of it, was wide-eyed with interest now. "Oh! . . . Oh!" She breathed that irrationally.

"Make it $700, then," Loumann tossed at Pop. "And $500 for the baby, plus a thousand flat bonus for your contract, Miller. T. J. write it an even $1200 a week in her contract. She'll be the baby's guardian anyway, and after we feature her in the first flying picture, we can make it—"

"Hey!" Pop was still incoherent, and by now Elmer Summers was dancing a little jig. None of the other men listening were quite normal, either.

"Where is she at?" T. J. Natwick demanded.

Pop got his tongue. "She—she ain't here now, gentlemen! Just stepped out a minute ago. But she—"

That's all Blythe heard. She knew where Nancy was. Nancy had slipped out a side door 10 minutes ago when she, Blythe, was stalling and waiting frantically for a call from Duane.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Wide World Sports Columnist

New York, Nov. 6 —(AP)— That idea of having Eastern and Western major leagues next season is as dead as a slow-footed Nazi in Egypt, but while it lasted it did show up one of baseball's greatest weaknesses — the guys who run the game. . . . Reading some comments in this week's "Sporting News" we've reached the conclusion that some of the reactions were at least as silly as the idea. . . . or don't they remember how they handled "no" when such popular innovation as night baseball came along? . . . Regardless of the merits of the idea, we can't see the point of such statements as Sam Breadon's, "If ever we have to come to that, let us lock the gates." We like steak for dinner, but we wouldn't keep our mouth shut for the duration rather than eat hamburger.

Baker's Half Dozen
Duke Coleman of Excelsior, W. Va., reports that when he covered a high school football game between Gary and Graham, Va., recently, he found that the Graham team was composed of six regulars and one substitute, all names numbers. They're all brothers and good enough to win four out of five games. . . . Wonder what the referee did when that sub came in and reported: "Saunders in for Saunders."

Nums Numbers
There's an old yarn about a footballer who was being given a special examination by the college dean. . . . "Young man, what is the sum of seven and seven?" The dean asked. . . . The griddle thought had and responded, "Twelve."

Just then the football coach broke in, "aw, let him pass, dean. He only missed by one. . . . What brings this up is a report from Akron, O., about a high school coach who sent in one sub during a hot game and tuesat the error until two plays had been run and when he finally sent in the eleventh man, his team was penalized for taking too many times out. . . . In this connection, Jim Schlemmer of the Akron Beacon-Journal points out that Coach Rossy Starr of Kent State college was a bit smarter. Finding he had twelve men on the field, Rossy sent in two subs and while they were reporting beckoned three players to the sideline.

Today's Guest Star
L. J. Siddy, Syracuse Herald-Journal: "Branch Rickey's first move as generalissimo at Brooklyn indicates he wants to preserve the Dodger tradition as 'daffiness boys,' he drafted Dee Moore, former Syracuse catcher. As a chief, Moore, a man with as much natural ability as any catcher in baseball, could march in step with the daffiest Dodger that ever sang tenor after midnight in Sheepshand Bay."

"YOU'RE a smart man, Abe," T. J. announced.

"Look, T. J., how's this—Sweetheart of the Flying Fields! The Girl Who Keeps 'Em Flying—no, too long—say, the Sky-High Girl. America's Sky-High Girl, Miss Nancy Hale!"

"Okay, okay, but she's Mrs. Hale, Abe."

"Make it Miss. Telephone Baker in New York. Tell him to put publicity department onto it, quick! The Aviators' Sweetheart. Perfect! Phone Baker quick and—"

"Listen, Abe, the girl's a widow with a youngster, but you want her to be a Miss! Now listen, you have to—"

"Your worry," Loumann barked. "Yours and Baker's. Make her famous, quick. Make her beautiful. Make her the Spirit of Aviation. Make her the cadets' dream. Order half a million color stills. Send one to every aviator in the Air Corps, free. Take 20 poses and have 'em in my hotel room tonight. Take her—"

"What about the baby?" Natwick cut in.

"Put the baby under contract, too, quick. Start him at $200. Start Nancy at $500."

Pop Miller got in a word. "Hey!"

"Where is she?" Loumann demanded. "Where is she now?"

"Fi—five hundred dollars?" Pop croaked.

Blythe, overhearing all of it, was wide-eyed with interest now. "Oh! . . . Oh!" She breathed that irrationally.

Barker Selects Wisconsin Over Powerful Iowa

By HERB BARKER
New York, Nov. 6 —(AP)— Taking the weekly aim in the general direction of football winners (and hitting some, perhaps):

Wisconsin-Iowa: Not as easy as some might think, but a vote for Harder, Hirsch, Schriener and Wisconsin.

Noire Dame-Army: Normally this is close every year. It probably will be again. Doubtfully, Notre Dame.

Texas-Baylor: The upset of TCU proved Baylor's class but even so this stubborn guesser goes along with Texas.

Georgia-Florida: Frankie Sinkwich and his mates will have trouble getting "up" for this one. But we pick Georgia.

Kentucky-Georgia Tech: Georgia Tech.

Temple-Boston College: If Boston College aren't the best team in the east, somebody will have to prove it to this corner. Boston College.

UCLA Oregon — A determined ballot for UCLA, heading, perhaps, for the coast conference title.

Ohio State: This seems to come under the head of unfair competition. Ohio State's below par.

Indiana-Minnesota: The Gophers are clicking. Minnesota.

South Carolina-Alabama: The Gamecocks have been a disappointment. Alabama.

Missouri-Nebraska: This should settle the Big Six race. A solid vote for Missouri, last year's titleholder.

California-Southern California: Throw out the form charts here. On the flip of a coin. Southern Cal.

Harvard-Michigan: Perhaps this will be a toss-up, but there's no reason to believe the Wolverines can cope successfully with the Wolverines. Michigan.

Missouri-Nebraska: This should settle the Big Six race. A solid vote for Missouri, last year's titleholder.

Rose Bowl to Hold Annual Grid Game

Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 6 —(AP)— The Rose Bowl football game, transferred to the east coast last year when California went on an all-out football, will return to Pasadena next New Year's day, an unimpeachable source said today.

The Associated Press learned that the formal application has not yet been sent to the western defense command, but that it will be approved when it is received.

The source of the information cannot be disclosed.

The Army ordered cancellation of last year's contest in the midst of intensive war preparations throughout the west coast. The game was played on New Year's day at Durham, N. C., Oregon State defeating Duke, 20-16.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Wheat and corn prices rose a cent a bushel today to the best quotations in months as the grain market reflected improved demand, large shipping business in cash corn and purchase by Ireland of 400,000 bushels of No. 2 yellow U. S. corn.

Mills were more active on the buying side in the wheat pit than for some time, according to floor brokers. This reflected floor business in most cases, they said. Flour prices were believed to be the best since establishment of ceilings more than a month ago.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Nov. 6.—The rout of the Axis in Egypt revived the so-called peace buying in the stock market today and selected issues rose fractionally to 2 points or so, many to new highs for the year or longer. There were a few wider gains.

Uneven trends ruled the list at the start, but demand soon made its appearance for numerous stocks that might profit by a quicker finish of the war than had been generally expected. Even some shares of the armament type did moderately well and plus marks predominated near the close. Ralls were among the leaders and a number of leaders failed to make headway.

Volume picked up with prices and transfers for the full stretch were in the neighborhood of 700,000 shares.

British Split

sinking six more Axis vessels and damaging two others in the Mediterranean.

The Axis air forces appeared to have been virtually driven from the interior by Egypt, the British reported, and their troops were free from aerial attack yesterday while their own bombers hammered at the enemy almost unopposed.

Five enemy fighters which tried to intercept Allied planes were shot down yesterday along with a small communications aircraft. Allied losses were put at four planes.

As the British Eighth Army pursued its advance across the desert, the potential battle area, limited heretofore to the narrow front between the Mediterranean coast and the Qattara depression, widened steadily.

Although some Axis forces were reported yesterday to be holding out in isolated spots on the southern end of the Alamein line, Montgomery asserted that they would quickly be "put in the bag."

Allied bombers, operating in endless relays, attacked the fleeing Axis forces from dawn to dusk yesterday, paying special attention to the coastal road which is the enemy's main avenue of retreat.

Allied airmen observed many huge fires burning along the line of the Axis retreat and it appeared that the enemy was burning supply dumps.

In addition to attacking targets in the immediate battle zone, a mixed force of United Nations bombers swept across the Mediterranean Wednesday night to batter the Axis airdrome at Maleme.

Advances from the front indicated that the Allied Mediterranean patrol were doing their work so well that the Axis airmen's bases were beginning to feel an acute fuel shortage.

Stalin Again

day to day."

He said that "no sane man" would attempt to destroy Germany, "but we will destroy the Hitlerites' military power."

The second task after that, he said, would be to eliminate the "slave system" which Germany calls the new order, and the third task would be to destroy the builders of this order.

Still, however, the Soviet premier said a special meeting of the Moscow Soviet would be convened to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution, which never had fore had Russian been as strong and well-organized on the home front.

The break-through in the west, he said, after the Red Army had routed the Germans on the approaches to Moscow last winter, attacked and seized the offensive. Returning a second time to mention of the second front, Stalin said that the Germans had been able to take the initiative because the absence of a second front in Europe enabled them to do it without risk to themselves.

Stalin asserted that the Russians recently had won possession of a German document showing that the Nazi plan nowhere realized was to take Stalingrad last July 25, then Saratov Aug. 9, Kuchevsk Sept. 15 and Baku Sept. 20.

The main aim of the offensive was to finish the war this year by taking Moscow, Stalin added.

"In their hunt for oil and for Moscow, the German strategists have got into difficulties," he said.

"The main reason of German success this year is the absence of a second front," Stalin said.

He said there had been a second front in Europe during the first World War, the position of the German armies today would be bad indeed."

Certificates in Retailing Are Presented

An assembly program was held Thursday at the high school by Miss Evelyn Schaffhauser and Vernie Pitts, area coordinators of Distributive Education of the State Department of Vocational Education, which was the completion of a two-weeks series of training sessions in Modern Retailing, War Time Problems of Retailing, and Package Wrapping and Conservation, held by the Chamber of Commerce and the Hope Public Schools through the cooperation of local merchants.

One hundred fifty certificates in Package Wrapping and Conservation Economics were presented.

The course in Modern Retailing had been especially designed for the beginning or new salespersons. Topics discussed were store rules and policies, creating customer good will, knowledge of merchandise, suggestive selling and handling difficult situations.

Olsen, Walker Speakers at Rotary Club

Olle Olsen and Capt. Linus Walker were the speakers at today's Rotary club luncheon at Hotel Barlow, Mr. Olsen urging a 100 per cent turnout for the Armistice day program next Wednesday, November 11, in the Saenger theater.

Captain Walker, telling the club that the Army and civilian organizations are doing the nation's fighting and welfare of the nation's fighting forces.

Mr. Olsen in his speech thanked the Rotary for agreeing to close between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. on Armistice day, joining in the downtown parade forming at the Legion hall at 10:15 and attending the patriotic program in the Saenger at 11 a. m.

Captain Walker, former treasurer of the local club, now stationed at the induction center at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, praised Rotary clubs USO and civilian groups for kindly hand extended all ranks in the Army, and said the soldiers appreciated it.

E. P. McFadden announced that the Rotary was sponsoring an inter-city meeting for southwest Arkansas Rotarians at Hotel Barlow at 7:30 o'clock Thursday, November 19, when Allen D. Albert, noted speaker on international topics, will be the guest. Mr. Albert will speak at Hope High School during the afternoon. This will probably be the last inter-city meeting for the district, due to gasoline rationing.

Guests of the club today were: C. A. Ricebini, of Ashdown; and Marlin Pool and Miss Virginia O'Neal, of Hope.

Winning War Is Only Aim Says President

Washington, Nov. 6.—(U. S. Press.)—President Roosevelt told a press conference today, in a brief discussion of Tuesday's election, that he was winning the war just as the president was.

The chief executive was asked whether the outcome of the election would make any difference in his attitude toward Congress.

"Why should it make any difference?" he assumed, Congress added wanted to win the war.

His question went on to remark, however, that what he wanted to know was whether Mr. Roosevelt would confer with both Republican and Democratic leaders about legislative procedure. He replied that he had been doing that.

To a question as to how he would account for the election results, which all but look away the Democratic majority in the house and Senate, Mr. Roosevelt gave a cryptic answer.

He said he had had a very pleasant surprise. On Tuesday morning, he said, he went to vote at Hyde Park, N. Y., and he was perfectly satisfied to find the polling place was open.

Some of those present thought he issued that remark as a commentary on the fact Democratic elective processes still operated in America.

Mr. Roosevelt's movement developed on Capitol Hill today for a Republican-Democratic "victory coalition" to proclaim a holiday on politics and drive toward the one common aim of winning the war.

The alliance would throw the power of both parties behind President Roosevelt for the most effective prosecution of war, but the Republicans coupled their pledge of support with demands for an end to "new deal politics and experiments."

"We are willing to forget the election if the administration will remember the implications of the election," said Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader.

Another leading Republican, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, proposed the coalition, saying Congress should create a "unified committee on war cooperation."

But while unity in the war effort appeared to be generally applauded, political observers watched for a possibility that House Republicans might develop a joint drive not only to halt "new dealism" but to erase some of its established works.

Spa Soldier Is Part of Ferry Group

By J. REILLY O'SULLIVAN

With American Forces in China, Nov. 6.—(U. S. Press.)—They're the "Dead Kids"—but not the kind you see in the movies.

A cheerful, hardworking bunch of enlisted men, they are employed at the dead end of Uncle Sam's longest Army ship line some 18,000 miles from home.

It's these kids who repair and service transport planes on the turn-around of the India-China Ferry Command.

Their work is hard, hot, and boring, but they are doing it with pride and skill in the name of their country.

Over time means nothing to them when they're working up their pet transport, the flying freighters which carry the only war tools to the China theater.

The label "Dead End Kids" was hung on them by Major F. C. Duke Doring of Madison, Wis., commander of the last and most dangerous leg of the Ferry Command over the towering extension of the Himalayas.

Americans Are Taking More Active Part in Air Attacks

By CLAYTON KNIGHT

For The Associated Press

London—Daily more and more American fliers are joining the aerial sweeps across the English channel into enemy territory.

They're getting the action—the experience—they came looking for, whether it's in fighter planes, light bombers or the famed Flying Fortress.

The daily dispatches tell you what a good account of themselves they are giving. But the picture is even more impressive when you are on the scene. Veterans of three years of aerial warfare, the British are quick to recognize good flying and fighting when they see it.

A few months ago, when the first USAAF pilots began streaming in here, the British usually took on a big sweep maybe half a dozen Yanks out of a total of four or five fighter squadrons.

Now it's the common thing on a similar sweep to find two whole squadrons of fighters piloted by American fliers can count on this number increasing rapidly. Many Americans are flying the British-made Spitfires, but in the bomber classes they're doing their stuff in their own twin-engine "Bostons" and tough Flying Fortresses and the new Liberators.

Listen to this account of one of the "Bostons" exploits. It goes back to last July 4, but it tells the story:

They flew in low from the sea, two Yanks and an RAF veteran, wing-tip to wing-tip, their bellies above the choppy waves of the English.

To the Yanks, it was a fitting day for fireworks, and the R.A.F. lad was faintly amused that he was helping the boys from America celebrate the anniversary of a day that had been a dark one for Britain—the fourth of July, Independence Day.

The 3,000 horses in each of the twin-engine "Bostons" were thundering loudly. At the controls of one plane, on the right side of the formation, sat Captain Charles Kegelman, of El Reno, Oklahoma, watching the lead plane and hoping it close as they neared the sandy shore that was enemy territory.

Out in the glass nose of Kegelman's plane, Lieut. Randall Dorton, Jr., of El Reno, Calif., strained his eyes for his first look at Nazi-occupied ground.

Up top, Sergeant Bennie B. Cunningham, of Tupelo, Miss., had his twin guns in readiness. At the belly gun, underneath, was Sergeant Bob Gay, of Fredonia, Kansas.

These lads were about to have a

But of course there is the compensation of all of it. If any dined decides not to co-operate for the good of his nation at the war, the O.P.A. will save his rubber for him by withdrawing his gasoline ration book.

Theoretically the sale is voluntary. No motorist need fear that a policeman or a United States marshal will bring a warrant and seize his tires if he chooses not to sell.

But of course there is the compensation of all of it. If any dined decides not to co-operate for the good of his nation at the war, the O.P.A. will save his rubber for him by withdrawing his gasoline ration book.

We do not think that this compensation will need to be used. The American public has shown a tremendous willingness to do anything specific for which it is given a good reason. The need to assure tires with which to get war workers to and from their jobs is a good enough reason for anybody.

We expect that the government will get as full co-operation in this as in the scrap campaign.

In Deadly Earnest

The fuel oil conservation program is a serious matter. The sooner every householder who uses oil gets that through his head, the better his chance for a moderately comfortable winter.

There is no guaranty of a 65-degree temperature. The oil ration will be designed to give that temperature to a properly prepared building, capable of keeping heat in and cold out. And there will be no sympathy—or fuel oil—wasted on households who have to use oil but are too lethargic to plug the holes and leaks in their buildings.

Moreover, one must not be over-optimistic about that plan. It is to increase the value of coupons if it gets over-cold, or about permission to use coupons in advance of their normal due date. There will be just as much oil to meet all needs. When it's gone, there won't be any more.
